SAFETY SEMINAR featured speakers

Jody Laird
the John Petropoulos
Memorial Fund

Keynote Speaker As a 911 dispatcher in Calgary, Jody is the ear on the other end of the radio for police officers, and she takes the task of helping them get home at the end of each shift seriously. Jody is a passionate and accomplished public speaker.

Protecting Those Who Protect You - The story of Const. John Petropoulos' death is a powerful example of why workplace safety measures need to be in place for everyone who comes onto a property – and how to help make that happen. Through changing workplace procedures to make it safer for first responders, you make it safer for everyone, including your own workers, service workers, visitors, clients, and customers.

David Fennell
David Fennell Safety Inc.

Director, Dave Fennell Safety Inc. Retired Senior Safety Advisor for Imperial Oil, Senior Technical Professional - Safety for ExxonMobil, Canadian Safety Professional of the Year

10 Influencing Factors for Risk Tolerance Dave Fennell conducted research on this topic when he was with ExxonMobil and Imperial Oil. He has since retired and now shares practical approaches to reduce the acceptance of risk in all industries. Dave is a dynamic presenter whose approach to safety is featured in videos and used around the world. He will help us understand these concepts and assist in implementing risk tolerance strategies that will make our work places and lives safer.

Clarinda Spijkerman
Return to Work Specialist,
Workers' Safety and Compensation Commission

Clarinda Spijkerman works directly with employers to implement and maintain Return to Work (RTW) programs which benefit injured or ill workers and the employer.

There are key components and steps to developing a RTW program, identifying safe modified duties that allow for an injured or ill worker to safely return to work, while maintaining the safety of co-workers as well. Clarinda's presentation will describes how, through the RTW program, employers and workers identify modified and alternative work and adjust workloads to accommodate a recovering worker.
